

Druce Collection: Index of Autographs of British Botanists A-Y

This is an archive from named individuals who corresponded with George Claridge Druce (1850-1932), who was one of the main benefactors of Oxford University Herbaria. The 'autographs' are not just signatures but exist in the form of letters, postcards, photograph/portraits and notes relating to the individual. The items were arranged and bound by Druce in six thickly bound volumes, organised mainly in alphabetical order of the surname of his correspondents. An index of these items has recently been compiled.

Explanation of the Index

The names of 'authors' of the letters and postcards are given followed by birth and death dates when known. This is followed by the Druce volume number the items appear in (1-6), the number of preserved letters and postcards from that individual, plus a note relating to any extra items. These items may consist of a photograph/portrait of the individual, an obituary, a newspaper cutting, a hand-written plant list or other miscellaneous notes, in one case a telegram.

In most cases Druce added the title and initials of the individuals that appeared on the letters, and sometimes first names, on an interleaved page between different entries. In the index compiled, full names have been added for completeness to identify the individuals with their birth and death dates. These were checked in a number of sources, for botanists, in Cloukie's An Account of the Herbaria of the Department of Botany in the University of Oxford (1964) or in Desmond's Dictionary of British & Irish Botanists and Horticulturists (1994). The individuals were determined by using information of the addresses given on the letter heads, the dates the letters were written, and their subjects of expertise as noted by Druce. Sometimes the full names and dates are given in square brackets as complete verification may be needed. However not all the people have been identified completely. For a few people, where there is no definite information, and only initials are given, their birth and death dates have not been determined.

The list of individuals is not confined entirely to botanists but includes several prominent people from the pharmaceutical, medical, scientific and wider natural history communities with an interest in plants and natural history in different contexts. This archive reflects Druce's networks of professional colleagues and friends, and gives a snapshot of individuals of note in the wider botanical world of late-nineteenth century and early-twentieth century Britain.
